

the 1990s, the number of people in the UK who are aged 65 and over has increased from 10.5 million to 13.5 million, and the number of people aged 75 and over has increased from 4.5 million to 6.5 million (Office for National Statistics 2000). The number of people aged 65 and over is projected to increase to 16.5 million by 2020, and the number of people aged 75 and over to 8.5 million (Office for National Statistics 2000).

There is a growing awareness of the need to address the needs of older people in the UK. The Department of Health (2000) has published a strategy for older people, which sets out the government's commitment to improve the lives of older people. The strategy is based on the following principles: (1) older people should be able to live independently and actively; (2) older people should be able to access the services and support they need; (3) older people should be able to participate in the decisions that affect their lives; and (4) older people should be able to live in a safe and secure environment. The strategy also sets out a number of specific objectives, including: (1) to reduce the number of older people who are in care homes; (2) to improve the quality of care in care homes; (3) to increase the number of older people who are employed; and (4) to improve the health and well-being of older people.

The strategy is a key document in the development of policy for older people in the UK. It provides a framework for the development of services and support for older people, and it sets out the government's commitment to improve the lives of older people. SHIELD

Youth, free from restraint, generate sounds

Exploding with the freshness of youth, sounds surge through the halls of Highland High.

A murmur of excitement prevails, but within are cries of pain, sighs of relief, and cheers of happiness.

Sometimes more than the expected is needed to electrify sounds.

On December 25 many were oblivious to the faint whine of the sirens, while others scurried to watch the wild fire rip through the entire north wing. Stunned by sounds of destruction and reconstruction, individuals adapted to a new routine, and unmarred dreams became realities. Prom -- sighing over a wonderland . . . homecoming -- ripping open the last kleenex box . . .

graduation--reminiscing old times. Nothing superficial, nothing rehearsed, these are genuine SOUNDS OF YOUTH.

Happiness is evident by the expressions and sounds of laughter. Chris Davidson exemplifies youth displaying emotions freely.

Sounds of silence prevail as thoughts of an intriguing subject enter into the questioning mind of Rosemary Goolik.

Echoing throughout the gym, the vibrant sounds of the trombone executed by Lee Schmidt accompanied the shouting boosters.

Whizzing through intersections, youths release their tensions with whispers turning to shouts to overcome sounds of shuffling feet.

Seniors congregating on the senior court was a common sight between classes and during lunch when this atmosphere was appreciated.

Blanketed with snow, the all school court remained closed in inclement weather, but opened its doors in spring and fall.

Blackened shelves and mounds of ashes portray only a small part of the destruction caused by the unexpected fire which blazed the afternoon of Christmas Day.

Fire, construction, change building, affect student life

With eager readiness Highland High School opened its doors in September, and students soon grew accustomed to a hectic school life after summer vacation. However, this peaceful scene was drastically modified within the next few months. A Christmas Day fire ripped through the north wing, completely destroying nearly 30 classrooms and resulting in extensive smoke and water damage to the rest of the one-story, contemporary building. Even as the old was being repaired, Highland again experienced "growing pains", as construction was begun on a swimming pool, new gymnasium, auditorium, and a two-story, 25 classroom addition. The high school experienced its most drastic changes that marked the beginning of a new and different way of student life . . .

Bracing the bitter cold as well as the roaring flames and overwhelming smoke, firemen diligently work to get the blaze under control.

Ecstatically happy, newly crowned Homecoming Queen Sally Newberry struggles to retain her crown while receiving congratulatory wishes from another nominee after the unbelievable announcement.

Silhouetted against a blazing bonfire, cheerleaders boost Homecoming spirit as they lead pep sessions from the platform and at the football field, comprising part of Thursday's activities.

Spirit soars as homecoming festivities begin

Crisp fall winds greeted students as they gathered for the initial homecoming festivities Thursday night preceding the game. Despite the cold, school spirit surged through students as they huddled around a blazing bonfire. Both cheerleading squads led the group in spirited yells at this time and later proceeded to the football field, where several members of the football team gave rousing speeches that were greeted with bursts of applause. But this scene suddenly changed—silence swept over the spectators as they awaited the announcement of their queen. Anticipation and excitement rose to a climax—Sally Newberry accepted the crown and began her reign as Homecoming Queen. With this phase of the festivities over, students realized the mere 24 hours separating this glory from gametime.

Leading Trojan Boosters to the football field after the bonfire for pep talks, more cheers, and the crowning of the queen, varsity and junior varsity cheerleaders head the snakedance.

Showing the confidence and pride they have in their team for the upcoming game against Merrillville, football team co-captains Bill Allen and Jim Darnell, seniors, give pep talks at the Thursday night rally.

Early dismissal initiates festivities

Fun, excitement, and work—these were the elements of a festive Homecoming '68. A 12:30 dismissal granted students time to complete their clever and colorful parade entries. Also, before game time alumni were honored at a coffee hour in the school library. Highlighting half-time activities, Queen Sally Newberry and her court were re-presented followed by the announcement of trophy winners. The senior float, "Bury 'Em", captured first place and "Pride Is Our Power" took second for the juniors. Key Club's "Mow 'Em Down" and FHA's "Stir 'Em Up" won first and second place awards, respectively, for cars. Homecoming spirit and pride were then focused on the long-anticipated game, and the Trojans secured a 25-19 victory over Merrillville.

Radiantly smiling as she parades around the football field, Queen Sally participates in half-time festivities of the 1968 Homecoming.

Reigning victoriously for the second successive year, seniors proudly displayed their entry, "Bury 'Em", symbolizing weeks of work by the class.

Victory sounded through the air as gridmen rang their bell after a successful Homecoming game against the Pirates. Battling to the final seconds, Trojans won 25-19.

Another Trojan touchdown brings a smile to the face of varsity cheerleader Sheryl Engerski.

Long hours of practice prove to be worthwhile as Sandi Little sings her way to first runner-up.

Tears of happiness are revealed after a shocking announcement. Nancy Biggs proudly accepts the crown from Pam Drapeau and performs her first duty as the new Jr. Miss.

Shock, happiness evident as climax reveals new titles

Anxious glances were exchanged; throats suddenly became dry. Long hours of hard work prepared thirteen senior girls for this night, and now they awaited the announcement of Highland's fourth Junior Miss. After what seemed to be an eternity, the runners-up were each presented and then—Nancy Biggs accepted the title, numerous gifts, and a trip to the state pageant as the new Junior Miss. In December two students were also honored at the annual GAA Turnabout Dance. Queen Kathy Olivotto and King Don Zisoff reigned at "Wintermist," a theme executed in blue, silver, and white. Valentine's Day meant "An Evening at the Key Club" to the many couples who attended the Key Club's annual Sweetheart Dance. All too soon the announcement of Sweetheart Queen, Gail Sweeney, concluded the evening in this nightclub atmosphere.

Reigning as the 1969 Sweetheart Queen, Gail Sweeney clutches her roses while last year's queen Rosemary Locasto adjusts her crown.

In a cafeteria decorated to resemble a night club, couples danced, enjoyed refreshments or just appreciated each other's company.

Beauty, splendor of colonial days revived at prom

From the flower-lined corridors to the softly lit "ballroom", the 1968 Junior-Senior Prom, "Colonial Courtyards", captured the radiant beauty and splendor of the past in its decorations and its atmosphere. Couples entered a re-created garden of towering trees and brightly-colored flowers, which led them to their destination: a spacious "ballroom" with stately pillars and velvet draperies. While dancing to the music of the Vito Manno Orchestra, the magic of the evening captivated everyone present. A tie vote brought Janyce Hope and Betty Bodley to the throne as Prom Queens, and Kevin Roche donned his crown as the new King. Time expired, and "Colonial Courtyards" again became a part of the past. But, its enthralling magic was still very much alive.

Bumblebees for each couple were planted in a hedge formed from wood, chicken wire, paper, and hours of labor. Ken Jones and Debby Stevenson look through the greenery for their own names.

Captivated by an atmosphere of stately pillars and twinkling chandeliers, couples sway rhythmically to the romantic sounds of Vito Manno Orchestra.

Overcome by the surprising outcome of a tie queen vote, Queens Janyce Hope and Betty Bodley and King Kevin Roche reflect their disbelief along with last years' royalty Anita Bodley and Tony Paglis.

Emotions of happiness are expressed by Tom Richards, Ann Baade, Bev Terpstra and Mike Gall as they take a breather in the courtyard.

Ruffles, turtlenecks mark fashion scene in new '68 styles

Head to toe co-ordination highlighted the fashion scene this year. Starting at the top, versatile hair styles complimented outfits. The feminine look prevailed for girls; whether long, short, real, or fake, curls were for girls, while boys sported conservative sideburns. Ruffles, patterned hose, and mod watches added the finishing touches to girls' ensembles, and leather clothing also became a common sight around school. Shoes took on the old-fashioned look with chunky heels for girls, wing tips for boys, and plenty of brass for all.

Adding variety and color to a once limited choice of boys' clothes, turtleneck sweater and slacks ensembles and modified versions of the Nehru were comfortable for class, games, and soc-hops. Whatever the look, boys also found the mod watch to be a practical addition to a wardrobe.

Papering a locker takes patience, agree sophomores Julie Mikula and Cheryl Ribicki, as they apply bright printed paper.

Arpa confronts many firsts during US stay

Have you ever thought about breaking the ties between family and friends for a new and different way of life in a foreign country? Arpa Nititham, the American Field Service exchange student, found the transition difficult and confusing at times, yet an over-all rewarding experience. Arpa learned family customs during her 18-week stay with the Hanks. After trick-or-treating for the first time dressed as a Japanese girl, Arpa looked forward to her first snow and a Thanksgiving turkey. School life at Highland included other "firsts"—students changed classes instead of teachers, and she viewed "real football games," not Americanized versions of soccer. Arpa also took part in extra-curricular activities including French Club, Booster Club, and the American Field Service which made her stay in Highland possible.

Exchange student Arpa Nititham explains the different customs and ways of every day living in Bangkok, Thailand, her home country, to her "sister" Carol Hanks, junior.

Playing the part of the nurse in the one-act play "The Long Christmas Dinner," Arpa actively participates in the student life at her newly adopted high school.

American meals, customs and life rapidly become familiar to Arpa as she stays with the Hanks' during her 18-week visit in the United States.

Musical, dramatic productions reflect talents

Whether a comedy or a psychological drama, musical and dramatic productions were the result of countless hours of dedicated effort; stage crews and cast members worked together to perfect their parts of the productions. From the rising of the curtain to the final call, the operetta, "Patience; or Bunthorne's Bride," was delightfully amusing. Potential actors and actresses worked under student directors to produce the five one-act plays for the fall presentation. "Princess Rebecca Birnbaum," "Two Fools Who Gained a Measure of Wisdom," and "Some of My Best Friends" were the comedies included on the program. "The Long Christmas Dinner" and "The Rocking-Horse Winner," two dramas, proved to be equally entertaining.

A new house and family are begun, grow, and finally fade into nothingness in "The Long Christmas Dinner."

"Some of My Best Friends," a one-act comedy presents a satire on racial prejudice.

Starring in the operetta "Patience," produced by the music department last May are Marianne Callaway and John Irish.

Using her singing instead of speaking voice, Sally Bennett requests a favor from another member of the cast.

New graduates happily grasp to the future, after completing Mixed emotions filled the hearts of seniors, as they came one step closer to achieving their long-awaited goal of graduation. As their three years at Highland High drew to a close, they realized that they were leaving behind a senior court, cheering at games, and cramming for finals. Where happiness once radiated, there was a somber expression; where the eagerness of becoming seniors was once felt, there was a sudden emptiness; and where there were once tears of joy, there were now tears of sorrow. "For they can conquer who believe they can" became their motto, as the class rose to become alumni. With diploma in hand, the groundwork laid in the last twelve years possessed a definite meaning as their key to future happiness and success as tomorrow's leaders.

Guiding the class in scholastic achievement as well as leadership are Greg Turean, salutatorian, co-valedictorians Jean Diekman and Brian Benda, and class president, Tony Zatkulak.

diplomas, keys three-year stay

It is a long road each senior follows, but a whole lifetime lies ahead of these graduates. They look beyond the auditorium to an anticipated future.

In the commencement address, Mr. Herbert Schwomeyer, Butler University Dean of Men, expresses the idea of setting and striving toward goals, "And then some..."

As seniors file into the gymnasium for baccalaureate ceremonies, they face another concluding step of their high school career.

Tranquility soon replaces the 8 minutes of congestion and turmoil between classes and only the sounds of learning linger in the hallways. Listening closely outside opened doors evidence of knowledge is continually being transferred . . . through the pecking of typewriters, the buzzing of electric saws, and the swishing of tape recorders. Striving to reach their ultimate goal of fully developing the mind, amateurs stretch accepted concepts and probe into the mysterious unknown. Each day hundreds of sound waves travel through the mind transmitting bits of information, but the only sounds that leave the brain are in the form of questions proposed by inquisitive youths searching for answers. Digesting new forms of knowledge every day, students develop a keener appetite for new theories and applications which is half the battle of success.

ACADEMICS

Summer school encourages varied learning for students

"While visions of summer school dance in their heads. . . ." For 709 students the ending of the regular school year meant a two-week vacation and the beginning of an eight-week session of summer school.

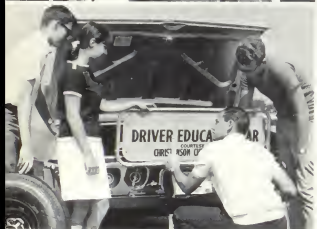

While learning the "rules of the road" in class, driver education students also spend two or three hours a week gaining valuable experience through practice on the road. With 288 trainees, the course had a record enrollment.

Future mathematicians, artists, and secretaries find computer programming, art appreciation, and typing beneficial for use in their chosen vocations. Speech class and physical education instill a variety of skills to all while encouraging freedom of expression.

Students desiring to get ahead in their studies for the coming school year are given the opportunity to gain credit in courses such as English, history, government and economics.

Beginning and established journalism students worked jointly to produce summer editions of The Trojan, a weekly publication, while benefiting from the first-hand experience in journalism it offers. Papers were produced in the Graphic Arts department.

Flat tire? No, Mr. Mike Poehlein is instructing Senior Ken Clark and Juniors Carol Buncheb and Joe Hirtz how to fix such a problem.

Refreshed by a cool dip, Junior Phyllis Jaynes takes advantage of the weekly journey to Wicker Park to learn the basics of swimming.

Skills, poise developed in physical education

While learning the rules of basketball, physical education students practice to improve their individual abilities at such things as dribbling, shooting, and guarding.

"Tie score—game point—it's up to me!" Stepping to the line, a teammate anxiously dribbles the ball. R-r-r-ring—time for showers—the game was over, and so was another hour of building and strengthening students through physical education.

By mastering the rules and skill of such sports as basketball, volleyball, softball, and tennis, class members prepare themselves for competition.

When students are not working as a team, they are striving to improve their own individual past records. Tests are also given to determine general knowledge and skill in various activities.

Co-ordination and poise are further developed with training in gymnastics, tumbling, and free exercise.

While learning the true value of "sportsmanship," participants are also instilled with the all-important idea of getting along with others.

After construction was begun on the new swimming pool, students were unable to use the gym for class sessions. While confined to the locker rooms, classes busied themselves with physical exercises, games, and study.

"Go on out for a pass!" Enjoying an active game of touch football became the daily activity of the boy's physical education classes, at least until the warm sunshine changed to a lingering coldness.

"It's up for two points!" Junior Ernie Burke takes careful aim and shoots to score and to put his team in the lead during a P.E. match.

D.E. students work ½ day, receive credit

A . . . B . . . C . . . Elementary education? Of course not. To become skillful at the typewriter, business students must start with the basic fundamentals of the keyboard and continue practicing. Advanced courses are available for those who meet the qualifications.

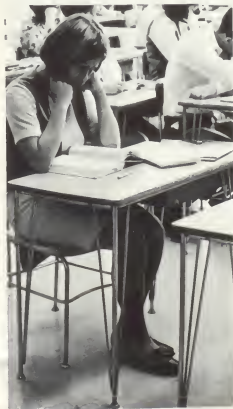

On the job training is the purpose of the newest addition to the business curriculum, distributive education. D.E. allows students to attend school on a half-day basis and to work the second half on a job where they are evaluated and receive both a grade and credit.

For teaching merchandising and salesmanship, the department has added mannequins and displays to the D.E. lab which simulates a store. Future business leaders are also able to work with the new electronic calculator, 26 additional manual and three electric typewriters.

Taking advantage of free study time, general business students concentrate on textbook assignments waiting for other instructions.

Following the teacher while he lectures over a chapter in the textbook, business law students are taught the intricacies of the business world.

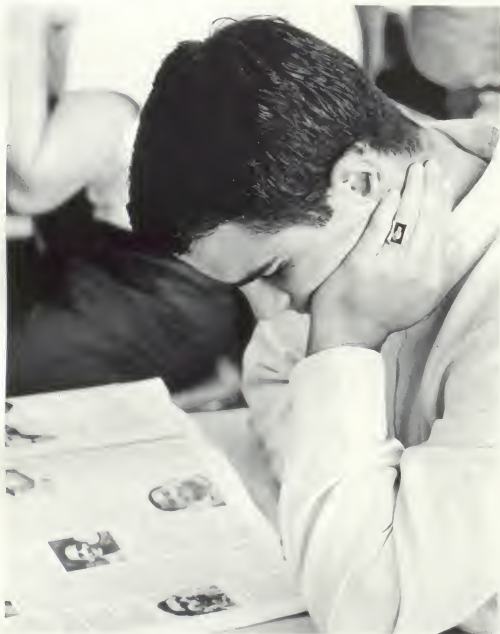

Using one of the new electric typewriters added to the business department, an advanced typing student, Paula Lea, senior, practices and strives to improve her speed and accuracy.

Listening intently to her lecturing teacher, Junior Laura Arnold studies a few of the many shorthand symbols which help prepare her for a future in the complex business world.

Exploring the natural wonders of the world, from the Ice Age to effects of weather on the earth today, geography students search for answers to intriguing questions.

Government class is not made up entirely of studying the Constitution and the making of the laws. Senior Tom Banta studies the Student Weekly while others concentrate on outside reading.

"Now wait a minute!" Senior Norma Moffat tries to get her point across in economics class. Many controversial topics are delved into and can lead students to become deeply involved in discussion.

Classes lead inquiries for mock election

Campaign rallies, speeches, buttons, and banners transformed hallways into a "convention center." These were signs of the mock election held on November 1 which better acquainted the student body with American election procedures.

Government and economics classes researched the national issues, candidates, platforms of the parties and the electoral college. Thus, members of these classes became better informed and more aware of the country's problems.

U.S. history classes study past events by first learning proper procedures for discussions and later, debating different aspects of the American past. These classes also were taught the previous forms of government that have been followed.

Sociology classes investigate human beings as a society, while psychology students delve into the working of man's mind. The world problems classes view the turmoil in today's society.

Psychology students, Seniors Rita Silverman and Irene Weinstein, concentrate on an important exam they missed because of absence.

Modern Math Aids Students in Calculations

$(t^2-1) \cdot (t+1) : (t^3-1) - (t^2+t+1)$ Solving difficult equations like this take much time and effort. But through practice, and with the help of slide rules, students become familiar with this type of problem, and they soon are much easier to solve.

In the course of math study, class members also make use of compasses and protractors as well as their own sense of reasoning for problem answering.

Computer programming is one example of the newer more advanced math that is taking over in all areas of this study. Students participating in these modern math courses realize how this math is better adapted for a great number of today's mathematical problems.

Having mastered the basics of problem reasoning and solving, geometry and algebra students are advanced to higher levels of math study. One of these is probability and statistics, which was revived this year. In this intriguing class the law of averages is studied by experimentation with such things as dice and coins.

With a straight edge and a compass as their only tools, geometry students Paul Smith and Bob Turner, sophomores, complete constructions on the board to illustrate proper procedure.

Showing the proper format to follow in proving a theorem, Mrs. Patricia Sims explains the substitution property of real numbers. Understanding basic functions is required of all geometry students.

Solving for "X", one of the first things learned in algebra, can become a much more complex problem in a more advanced class.

Senior Gene Hetrick prepares to solve a difficult problem of today's modern age. Becoming familiar with the intricacies of the computer is part of the learning process in computer math.

Students probe into unknown through science

Engaged in a scientific discussion, Juniors Scott Markley and Bill Prange go over their after-lab calculations. Working together, chemistry students gain a better understanding of the experiment.

Eager young minds probe the unknown in rooms filled with microscopes, test tubes, dissecting tools, and the smell of formaldehyde. This is the predominant atmosphere in the science classrooms.

Biology students are concerned with the characteristics, organization, and functions of life, ranging from that of a simple plant to one of a complex organism.

Chemical reactions, equations, and structures of substances are just some of the areas studied by chemistry students. Labs make it possible for them to see the practical use of this course and also gives them an opportunity to answer questions through experimentation.

Earth science a laboratory orientated course was a new addition to the science department. The study includes the earth's origin, history, and changes affecting it.

Through complicated problems, physics students are exposed to the dominating powers of life. Areas such as force, pressure, friction, and gravity were investigated to give class members a better understanding of what scientifically is happening in many every day occurrences, and the reasons why it does.

Cadets study space exploration, flight theory

From construction to count-down, a major concern of the Air Force Junior Reserve Officers Training Corps is space exploration. Cadets are trained to understand every aspect of aerospace education.

First year cadets tour the Nike Missile Site in Munster, Indiana. Seeing this base expands their knowledge of today's aircraft, and acquaints them with true military procedures.

Delving deeper into space study, second year cadets learn the theory of flight and how aircraft is controlled. A field trip to United Airlines in Chicago Illinois, enhances the material presented in the classroom and prepares them for the more advanced study of human factors and space exploration that they will encounter as third year cadets.

Weather data is sent daily to WGN television by the ROTC. They also present colors at every home football game, construct several entries for the homecoming parade, and march in it also.

Standing at strict attention, Juniors Tom Arrington and Steve Wargo salute the United States flag as the ROTC color guard lowers it after school.

Reflecting the pride of his country and flag, Junior Bob Ginther performs a daily duty in the proper manner characteristic of ROTC.

Following both the tape and his book, sophomore Bob Paglis listens attentively to the recording which he will soon have to memorize.

Attempting to explain, Sra. Escolastica Casiano interprets the translation of one of the basic sentences to a third year Spanish student.

Language students relate ideas, break communication barrier

Many miles lie between language students of the U.S. and their pen pals across the border line. Yet, as they relate ideas, customs, and knowledge of their own country even though they converse in a foreign language, they do not seem too foreign. By breaking the communication barrier existing between two countries, students learn more about the world around them.

French, German, Latin, and Spanish teachers try to make their respective language more appealing and easier to comprehend through the use of records, novels, tape recordings, movies, and research projects.

Customs, history, and geography of the countries are studied to increase interest and to grasp an understanding of the language and the people. Latin students conduct discussions of Roman life and play a form of "bingo" to assist them in learning the numbers.

French students traveled to Chicago for an educational and entertaining movie and dinner at a French restaurant. Several trips were taken by Spanish classes, including one to see the play "El Cid," and another to watch "El Sombrero de Tres Picos" at Griffith High School.

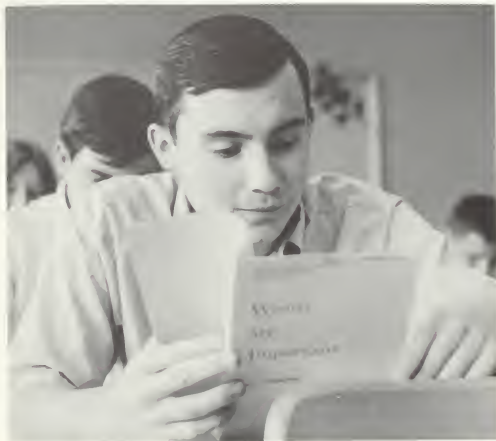

German teacher Mrs. Helen Beretz stresses an important point to her class. First through fourth year students study everything from the ABC's to the history and culture of Germany.

*After writing English themes, Seniors Linda Wasko and Gail Miller take time to discuss how they each explained the main characters in the novel Return of the Native.*

English classes emphasize communications

As a basic human activity, communication has and continues to influence everyone's way of life. Emphasizing this connection between all races, English teachers instruct students on proper speech and writing techniques.

Known literary works from plays to novels are read and thoroughly discussed. Questions concerning style, theme, and plot are answered and individuals are able to interpret and formulate their own opinions on the subjects.

In addition to these discussions, communication is also practiced in written form. Expressing ideas by writing themes encourages thinking, forming opinions and presenting these notions in a logical arrangement. New grammar and standard vocabulary books serve as references while working on compositions.

Students gain a deeper and more meaningful understanding of the English classes when the knowledge is applied to the everyday work in other classes.

While pondering over the meaning of one of the more difficult words in his lesson, Senior Robert Mareschen studies his vocabulary.

Sophomore English class members discuss the importance grammar plays in everyday lives, and why one should study it.

Expression, key goal for prospective actors

Expression of personality, ideas, and opinions plays a major role in school life at Highland. Characters' personalities come alive in drama class, where prospective actors and actresses present dramatic and humorous cuttings, poetry, and pantomime. The drama class also took part in the Northwest Regional Thespian Conference at Morton High School this year.

Entertaining monologues were included in the speech program for variety, while supplementing other kinds of speeches to help students overcome the "jitters" when speaking before an audience. Knowledge of speech presentation is put to use in debate, where controversial topics are researched, presented, and judged.

In order to learn the correct methods for relating ideas through publications, journalism students study writing techniques and journalism history. This study also involves selling ads for Trojanal special additions, a trip to the Chicago Tribune, and optional work on staffs.

Presenting an entertaining speech before an audience isn't always as easy as it seems. But for Junior Marsha Minter, captivating her viewers proves to be a small task as she gives her humorous interpretation.

In an attempt to persuade her audience to her own beliefs, Junior Adele Mongeraz proposes the most important arguments of the controversial subject.

Musicians, Artists Transform Ideas Into Finished Products

Happiness is to create—a mood painted on a canvas, emotion inscribed in a piece of music, or a completed product molded from clay. Fine arts gives students the opportunity to express themselves. By beginning with the minimum supplies, through their talents they change inspirations into masterpieces.

Whether it's long-haired or pop-rock, the sound of music from the band and choir interests people of all ages at football and basketball games, concerts, and the operetta. Taking part in these groups increases appreciation of instrumental and vocal music and develops skills of budding musicians.

Emotions become tangible when captured in descriptive sketches, paintings, and pottery in arts and crafts classes. Art appreciation courses review the history from the ancient times to that of the modern world. Great masterpieces and artists come alive by studying the individual styles and techniques used.

While practicing songs for a concert, Senior Diana Swisher waits for her cue as she follows the music of the other choir members' parts.

Sophomore Barbara Schreiber displays one of her many crafts projects which was made by arranging repeated three dimensional forms into a finished composition.

Family living visit hospital, study children

While donning aprons and whipping batter, boys soon learned that the women's work in the kitchen wasn't as easy as it looked. Potential chefs joined the girls in learning the basics of balancing and preparing meals.

Another first in the home economics department was the show of bridal fashions in the family living classes. This course, continued on a higher level, includes a trip to Saint Margaret's Hospital in Hammond to see the maternity ward. Family living students also bring their younger brothers and sisters to class for a day to study child behavior and mannerisms.

Clothing students examine styles of fashion as well as fabrics. For the public to see the accomplishments of the future homemakers, they present their finished creations at a spring style show, modeling all the latest styles in the current trend.

Already having learned the basic fundamentals of sewing, Junior Mary Ihnat puts this knowledge to use as she traces the darts of her unmade dress onto the material with which she will make it.

Home economics students discuss tests they have already taken to learn the correct facts which are involved in planning and cooking meals in their advanced cooking class.

Industrial arts broadens study to meet demands of the times

Contact with machines, science, and power is unavoidable in this mechanical age. In order to meet the demands of the changing times, industrial arts has broadened its course of study.

Graphic arts, and metal and wood shops teach students the actual production part of industry. This classroom-laboratory situation provides the opportunity for planning, construction, experimenting, and evaluating student projects. Girls found this work challenging, as they sawed and sanded projects they once termed "easy."

Drafting I became a one semester course and is now taught with a series of worksheets developed and printed within the school. Surveying was added to Drafting 2-3, and industrial design was included in the advanced level of the industrial arts program. Designing and drawing a go-kart was the highlight of this course.

In still another area of industrial arts, the technical aspects of industry are stressed, including transportation, communication, and research of the vital needs of a rapidly growing field.

Senior Oscar Nelson transforms an oblong wood block into a cylinder, thus completing another step toward the finished product.

Working with tools such as jig-saws, Sophomores Mike Campbell and Ron Chmielewski perform practical skill while completing useful projects.

Precise measurements and fittings are essential as Sophomore Mike Kelley and Senior Bob Hobbs learn the art of woodworking with Mr. Poropat's advice.

Bent eagerly over his architectural sketch, Joe Hirtz, Junior, uses his imagination and knowledge of drafting to create blue prints for future buildings.

Sh-h-h . . . Quiet! Silence disturbed by a mere wrinkling of a program or a questioning cry from a little boy bewildered by the sudden solitude. Questions were answered as the gym was quickly saturated with cries of excited fans bursting with enthusiasm during a cheer. Instilled with a driving force to compete and an everlasting desire to win, athletes participate in interscholastic sports and intramurals. In many, the sounds of sports becomes an all consuming desire. Restless nights are spent dreaming of whacking the ball, crashing through the enemy line, and most important clanging the victory bell. Yet it isn't the win or loss that's so important because each gains that inexplicable feeling of accomplishment, respect for others, and self-pride. Sports provide the essential opportunity for young minds to grow and develop into those of a man.

After their 19-14 victory over the Calumet Warriors, Trojan gridmen stand in line to ring the victory bell. Their '68 season was marked by a 6-3 record compared with the 2-7 compiled in '67.

By blocking a Calumet Warrior, Senior Mike Barnes makes an opening for flanker Don Knauss, senior, to gain yardage for the Trojan cause.

Highland's Trojans completed one of their most successful seasons in their history with a record of 6-3. The Men of Troy opened the year with three straight wins over Emerson, Lake Central, and Portage, respectively.

But even after dropping a game to Munster, students' pride in their team never changed, carrying them to an all important Homecoming victory. Even after terminating the season by being overpowered by arch-rival Griffith, the profitable year will live long in the memories of the fans, coaches, and players.

Even though Highland lost a chance for the play-off with Chesterton by bowing to Lowell, the Trojans have nothing to be ashamed of. Battling the Trojans proved anything but easy victories for the foes they lost to and were approached with respect and fear not only as a determined team, but also as an inspired one.

Shouting instructions for the next defensive play to juniors Tom Arrington and Greg Brandenburg is assistant coach Porter Evans. Four varsity coaches led the Trojans to a record season.

Completing a pass, Senior Earl Schreiber prepares for a run to gain yardage against the Merrillville Pirates in the Highland homecoming match.

Receiving important instructions to use in the next passing play from Coach Frank Houk, stationed in the press box, is junior Larry Day.

pride theme through actions on the gridiron

Exemplifying on the gridiron the true spirit and pride present in the student body, the football squad demonstrated their talents. The sights and sounds of the fans alone did not carry the Men of Troy through their winning season, though it made each victory a little easier to grasp and each defeat further away.

It sometimes seems unjust to evaluate football teams and games because each clash, won or lost, is simply the climax of a whole week's work, pain, and effort. The Trojans' victories were many, but past experiences never carried over into other games.

The determination of the Men of Troy was evident in each second of every game. The season was an excellent one due to an invaluable abundance of talent, leadership, and sportsmanship. But even if the Trojans had come out on the losing end, that talent, leadership, and most of all sportsmanship would still have been there.

Running to make the six points that put Highland in the lead to stay, Junior Dave Marshall, halfback, proved to be invaluable to the Trojans.

Harriers end record season fifth in state

With Rich White and Dave Bell leading the way, the Cross Country team added another fine year of competition to its record books. This year the Trojan Harriers finished first in the Calumet Conference and a respectable fifth in the state competition. The Trojans also won the LaPorte, Southmoore, and their own Highland invitational meets.

Cross Country is a tough sport with rugged practices because of long, hard, and sometimes odd hours. It takes a special kind of athlete to qualify, a person who is willing to get up early and practice before and after school as these 14 boys did. But the Men of Troy came up with the attitude—determination and drive to finish another successful season.

Prospects for next years squad looks enticing with six returning lettermen to bolster the Trojan attack with Coach Poehlein behind them. But for the graduating seniors their last season proved to be a very gratifying one to remember.

Bracing the cold, senior cross-country runners Terry Woolston, Mike Dugger, and John Stivers practice both before and after school for meets.

with 3-7 record

Court action was once again evident this fall as this years tennis squad, in its third season, compiled a record of 3 wins and 7 losses.

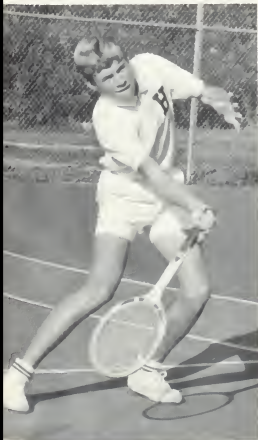

Highland opened the season with two strong victories against River Forest and Gary Wirt, 5-0 and 3-2, respectively. The net-men managed only one other victory against Crown Point, Griffith, Valparaiso, and Munster.

The official season actually began in early September and continued through October, but for team candidates the season started in August. Of those hoping for a varsity position, only seven were chosen.

Courts were in use every day during the summer and after fall months by teammates striving for excellence. Coach Rush has a bright outlook for next year. He will lose only one player through graduation.

The first singles were made up of Romie Sadabras and Dave Sawtell. Third singles were Don Sawyer and Jim McDonald. Phil Amodeo, Steve Hoff, Chuck Dijak, and Ed Dijak made up the doubles competition.

Silhouetted against the blazing sun, a racketman displays the beauty and grace necessary to become a top man on the court. Acquiring this form is a goal of all the teammates.

Romie Sadabras, sophomore, demonstrates his skill while returning a serve. Weeks of practicing drills accounted for nearer perfection on the courts.

Varsity grapplers return home with fifth in Indianapolis tourney

Varsity grapplers completed their 1968-1969 season with a respectable 11-3 record. The only losses came by the hands of Portage, Gavit, and Griffith.

After journeying down to the Indianapolis tourney, the wrestling team returned home with a fifth place finish. Scoring the majority of the points at the tourney were Jovan Vercel, Don Gordon, John Stivers, Lee Loy, and Corny Novak.

The Trojan squad lacked an experienced 145 lb. weight class entry, which was the team's main problem. Otherwise, the Torjans' success was due to the balance evident in all other weight classes.

Trojan matmen practiced every day before the final state championship, but did not compete due to a second place finish in the sectionals.

Coach Larry Johnson believes Al Killion and Bob Smolinski to be his best prospects for the 1969-1970 wrestling season. The J.V. wrestling team finished their 1968-1969 season with a fine record of 10-3, casting a bright outlook for next years varsity squad.

Senior Doug Flack, one of the leading scorers, notches up another victory after a tough match to add to Highland's successful record of wins.

Struggling for a pin, one of Highland's matmen desperately tries to hold his opponent before the final outcome is decided. Untiring determination and hard work is a necessity to produce a winning squad.

Don Gordon, junior, utilizes accomplished wrestling skills to maneuver his opponent into an unfortunate situation. Developing these talents enabled him to tally many profitable points for the Trojans.

Trojans end 69 season with improved record

Coach Darrell Morken led his Trojan Five to a fourth place finish in the Calumet Conference. The Trojans finished the regular 1968-69 basketball season with an 8-12 record. Last year, the squad finished last in the conference with a 4-16 record.

Led by Seniors Bob Szabo, and Dave Ranich, the Trojans looked like real contenders in the first few games of the season. But things seemed to falter after the Holiday Tourney at East Gary. Afterwards, Highland played at a mediocre 2-8 clip.

Morken, in his sophomore year as coach at Highland, stressed defense and hustle in practice sessions. Highland had plenty of speed and heighth, but very often had off-on games.

The Trojans best performance of the year was against Bishop Noll. Even though defeated by a score of 77-71, Highland looked ready for the Hammond Sectionals. But spirit alone could not carry them to victory as they dropped their first game to Gavit, 76-67.

Using the agility and quick thinking developed through long hours of practice, Senior forward, Dave Gilbert sets up a play. Junior Mike Law also aids in the Trojan cause.

Grasping last minute instructions during a crucial point of the game, Varsity teammates listen intently to Coach Darrell Morken as he explains a new strategy.

Against Portage, Senior Dave Ranich shoots for two during the last game in the old gym.

In Highland's first ball game of the season against arch-rival Munster, Junior Mike Law adds two more to his end total of 29 points, making him top Trojan scorer for the evening.

In a fast paced JV game, Sophomore Bob Wilhelm shoots for two more points which would place the Trojans even farther ahead in the contest.

Spirit, pride prove beneficial to cagers in regaining form

It was more than the skill and determination of the players that accounted for the Trojans' improved record. Pride on the part of the student body provided the Men of Troy with the incentive to regain their winning form evident in the 1965-66 season.

Even though Highland posted a below average record, the gym was always filled to capacity and the crowds never altered after moving home court to the jr. high gym.

Spirit overwhelmed the student body during Spirit Week before sectionals. Signs, posters, cheers, and cakes instilled desire in the players. The Trojans found the need to win not only for themselves, but for the entire student body, faculty, and community.

Even though they ended the season less victoriously than it had begun, the team gained a sense of pride, responsibility, and good sportsmanship which is longer lasting than just a win or loss.

Guard Dave Bell, junior, passes to a fellow Trojan to set up another play, while a Portage cager eyes the ball, ready for a fast break.

Aiming for another basket, Senior Greg Hicks is rushed by two Portage Indians trying to prevent another score.

Senior Bob Szabo tosses the ball in for two points raising the score higher for the contest with the Mustangs.

Inexperience serves as main task for linkmen to overcome

With the fresh spirit of spring in the air, the '69 golf team was instilled with a new enthusiasm and a longing desire to compete and to win.

Inexperience served as the teams main problem with only one returning letterman, Dave Pettit, and Mr. Porter Evans serving his first year as coach. Despite the apparent odds against the squad, sophomores Dave Boblik, Mark Roderhiger, Rich Russel, and Nick Poloson helped the Trojan cause.

These boys soon learned that practice doesn't make anywhere near perfect.

After long hours spent hitting the ball, the feeling of accomplishment which a hard-fought victory infuses proved to be well worth their time and effort.

Last year's linkmen Keith Lane and Darryl Slamkowski were co-winners of the Trojan "Outstanding Golfer Award." Success was also determined as Bill Phillips led the team to a Sectional Championship at Lake Hills. But they failed to qualify for state after being eliminated in regionals. The hopes of winning either the conference title or sectional crown remains in the hands of a new Trojan five.

Good judgement, a result of weeks of practice, is employed as Keith Lane carefully studies the situation before attempting his putt.

Dave Pettit, hoping to land his shot within putting distance of the hole, skillfully follows through with his club keeping his eye on the ball.

"ALL STAR" B-BALL CONTEST DETERMINES "CHAMPS"

Excitement and fun were the results of a fast-paced intramural ball game. Interested in playing and eager to learn, boys who aren't on the interscholastic team have a chance to compete against their friends while developing leadership, sportsmanship, and good bodies.

Under the direction of Mr. Jack Morris, basketball games were slated for Monday and Wednesday nights. After construction began on the swimming pool, games were played at Lincoln School. Fighting for the title of "Champs" were the Roadrunners, Thunderbirds, Martins, Cobras, Corvettes, Mustangs, Shellys, Turbines, Cougars, and the Camaros.

Each team consisted of 8-10 boys with chosen co-captains. About 90 boys signed up which was the only requirement and participated in the intramural program which continued from December through early spring.

Champions were decided in an "All Star" game while the "Champions versus Teachers" game added more excitement to the schedule.

Senior Ron Pauley dribbles past his opponent, attempting to reach his basket and score two points.

Giving last minute instructions, Coach Frank Houck advises his team what to do to combat the oppositions various plays and tactics in order to come out of the match victorious.

Members of three school's track teams compete in a Highland Invitational meet which took place last spring. Thinclads worked all winter long to prepare for this year's team.

Thinclads anticipate season with returning letter winners

Strength and competitive endurance proved to be successful goals for the '68 track squad and still held true for this year. Trying to improve the past records of the team, Trojans started practice in February to prepare for the rough season ahead against such opponents as Michigan City, Bishop Noll, and Chesterton.

Experience was a key which was hoped to open the doors to a successful season. The Trojan's strength lay in its number of experienced Harriers. Coach Poehlein's team had 13 returning lettermen and comprised one of the strongest units in the region.

Senior Bob Szabo was back in the high jump while Senior Mike Barnes and Mike Young and Lee Loy, juniors, competed in the 440 yard run. Trojan hurdlers were Seniors Mike Patterson and Bill Allen. Highland's distance hopes were placed on John Stivers, Mike Dugger, seniors, and Ernie Burke, Rich White, and Dave Bell, juniors. With this combination plus other hopefuls, the trackmen placed desire over ability.

One of the thirteen returning lettermen, senior Bob Szabo clears the cross bar, enabling him to continue on in the competition.

A member of the 1968 track squad, Dan Otto, attempts to surpass his own records, and also those of his competitors in the broad jump match.

Until another ball comes his way, an opposing team's outfielder stands serenely on guard.

Anxiously but calmly, Tim Juran watches his teammate step into the pitch and forcefully swing at the target. Awaiting his turn at the plate, the left-handed batter hopes to score that vital run for a victory.

Experience, defense advantages over enemy

Hoping to keep possession of the title of Calumet Conference champions, awarded to last years' squad, the 1969 baseball team was on the ball long before their first game.

Under the leadership of Coach Leroy Cable, positions were switched and new talents were discovered. Pitching proved to be the biggest problem after losing Tim Juran, the All-Conference pitcher. But the defense along with experience were good advantages against the foes.

Returning lettermen included seniors Dave Gilbert, Gordon Horn, Gary Kendrick, Don Knauss, Rich Rone, and Greg Hicks, who didn't see much action due to a football injury.

Trying to improve the '68 conference record of 9-2, having lost only to Merrillville and Lake Central, the Trojan nine started practices in March. Training both inside and outside the team prepared for opening day against Hanover Central and for the rough schedule which followed.

Proficiently cocking his arm, Senior Gordon Horn prepares to hurl the ball to the catcher during infield practice before the game.

Launching the baseball into mid-air, Tim Juran who became the All Calumet Conference pitcher confidently awaits the outcome of his pitch.

With the intent of putting his enemy out on the spot, Joe Skertich lunges to keep in line with the ball, but unsuccessfully beats the runner.

Discussion . . . argument . . . more talk . . . and finally decisions. While members of one club draw final plans for an award-winning float or attempt to raise money to send food to a needy family, others can be heard practicing cheers in deserted hallways. In a distant room, the guest speaker waits nervously on the side while the club president announces his presence by banging on the podium with the gavel. Silence envelops the candle-lit library as an initiation ceremony becomes a reality. Whether it's tuning up and practicing for the parade or rehearsing lines before the final call, each student sounds off in his own special way. Youthful voices are a vital part of any organization. By exchanging and formulating new ideas, plans on paper soon become concrete making the school and community a better place to live in.

As a cadet teacher, Bill Madura is often called upon to explain a technique or a minor flaw in a student's painting. Carol Indresyk listens intently as he comments on her painting.

'Cadet Teachers' work in local grade schools

"What will they think of me? What will I say? Suppose I can't help them with problems?" Questions such as these shot through the minds of nervous student teachers.

How does one become a nervous student teacher? Belonging to FTA for at least one year and being a senior are two qualifications considered.

For a peek into their future ambition, senior members of FTA became cadet teachers at area grade schools.

Sending a package of paper, pencils, erasers, and soap to Vietnam was just one project undertaken by FTA members.

In the spring, interested club members went on a field trip to Hammond where they were given the chance to visit and work with handicapped children for a day.

Other activities included a teachers' breakfast and ushering at Open House.

Planning for the annual FTA faculty breakfast are club officers Pat Rossner, president; Greg Hicks, vice-president; Leslie Brownlee, treasurer, and Rosemary Goolik, secretary.

FBLA President, Diana Swisher counts a show of hands as members vote on plans for the future toy drive. Donating toys to orphanages, FBLA brought Christmas cheer to homeless children.

FBLA sells taffy apples, collects toys

What is tart, sweet, and crunchy all at the same time and comes on a stick? Taffy apples sold by FBLA, of course! Members took turns selling taffy apples during their lunch hours and after school.

What? ... Highland High used as a workshop for Santa's helpers? Future Business Leaders of America's annual toy drive lead several people to receive such an impression. Members collected harmless, usable dolls, stuffed animals, and games to renovate for gifts to needy children. The toys were wrapped in gift paper and distributed to various orphanages and children's hospitals approximately one week before Christmas.

During the school year, FBLA also sponsored an awards banquet and took a field trip to the Federal Reserve Bank of Chicago. During all activities, members kept in mind the goal of the club, to become better community business leaders, and to prepare for tomorrow.

MCC activities include trips, helping others

"You can be the doctor and I'll be the sick person." Conversation of this type was common when they were young children pretending to be doctors, but as young adults, MCC members looked at their chosen professions more seriously.

Medical Careers Club provided its members with several opportunities to gain information on the various medical fields, ranging from a general practitioner to an anesthetist. To learn more about their chosen careers, members were able to listen to doctors and nurses speak at several club meetings.

Films were also used as information sources, along with visits to St. Margaret Hospital and mental institutions. During such field trips, members learned how to help others.

Realizing that their chosen careers are to involve much hard work, members of MCC had an opportunity to prepare themselves for such work while they campaigned for the HEART FUND later in the year.

FHA sells aprons, cookbooks for Christmas

A Daddy Date Night?! What is it? Actually it is not as shocking as it seems. FHA sponsored the event, consisting of a dinner and entertainment, to help the fathers get to know their daughters better.

Members of Future Homemakers of America soon realized that there was more to homemaking than just stabilizing the household. They learned to help themselves improve personal, family, and community living.

As Multiple Sclerosis workers, FHA members collected donations to help aid the cause.

Club members also acted as hostesses for the PTA Open House and supplied the washrooms with needles and thread for emergency mending needs.

Christmas was not a time to worry about gifts for the female members of the family. The girls put their wits and talents together and sold homemade aprons and several varieties of cookbooks. The proceeds went toward a scholarship fund.

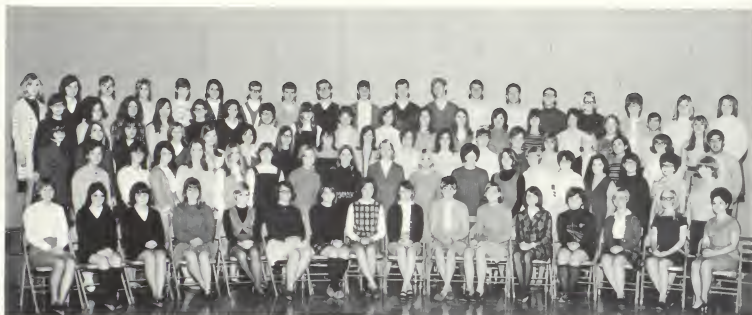

For the purpose of installing new officers for the coming year, Future Homemakers sponsored a banquet.

"It's round, has 'Trojans' stamped on it, boosts school spirit, and everyone ought to have one!" Such were the selling techniques of the American Field Service members as they paraded the halls selling Trojan buttons to aid the foreign exchange student program.

"Getting to know you . . . getting to know all about you . . ." AFS members had this goal in mind when they sponsored a soc-hop to acquaint Arpa Nititham, foreign exchange student from Bangkok, Thailand with the rest of the student body.

Selling charms and pins and sponsoring a soc-hop were two projects undertaken by French Club this year. "Vive La Trojans," the club's homecoming car, reflected the true spirit of the occasion.

How does a day in Chicago's German-town sound? Members of German Club were able to learn more about the customs and culture of Germany as they ate in a German restaurant and attended a German theater.

"I wish I could be a model." A wish came true for those who modeled in the annual Spanish Club Style Show and Card Party. Proceeds from the event were used to send a Highland student to South America.

Picnic helps acquaint Drama Club members

Pesty flies, annoying ants, sticky fingers, and grass-stained clothes—these were the experiences shared by Drama Club members at a picnic they sponsored in October. A game of football and a day in the sunshine were two ways that members were able to get to know each other better.

With a common goal in mind, members began rehearsals for five one-acts, "Two Fools Who Gained a Measure of Wisdom," "Some of My Best Friends," "The Rocking-Horse Winner," "The Long Christmas Dinner," and "Princess Rebecca Birnbaum." They were presented in the late fall.

Performing in area hospitals and orphanages, Drama Club added a "children's theater" to its list of activities for the year. Two three-act plays, presented in February and spring, also provided a chance for those interested to gain experience in the various aspects of drama. Besides acting, members also became acquainted with make-up, costumes, and lighting.

With the help of grease paint and anything else that would work, Drama Club make-up committee transforms Bob Combs, and the rest of the cast into various kinds of dogs in "Some of My Best Friends."

After receiving flowers from her date Steve Wargo, Rinkje Hoogewerf decides her sister, Pat Griffin; mother, Liz Wiley; and piano teacher, Jill Ustanik haven't really spoiled her appearance after all.

"Do you really think they're communists?" Phyllis Jaynes asks of Carol Bonner. The Play "Some of My Best Friends" presents a satire on the current racial issue.

In spite of the comforting hand of Judy Nastyn, reminiscing about past Christmases the family has spent together brings tears to the eyes of Judy Koselke.

An intruding maid played by Pat Revak, poor, destitute relatives, and no money themselves are all problems confronting George Novotny and his bride Jill Ranney.

NFL, Thespians perform in melodrama, plays

A sense of achievement... This is what most Thespians and members of the National Forensics League would agree to be most gratifying about being members of the clubs.

Outstanding students in the field of drama gained entrance into the National Thespian Society. In addition to stage presentations, Thespians sponsored a soc-hop to raise money. In November, the club sponsored the Northwest Regional Thespian Conference inviting forty schools in Indiana to participate. The program included such highlights as one-act plays, play cuttings, and workshops.

Students selected to be members of the National Forensics League were those who displayed exceptional speaking or debating techniques. Along with meets and other forms of competition between schools, NFL's activities for the year included a spring melodrama.

Speech team members Pat Rossner, Linda Parker, Terrie Evert, and Dough Welsh practice for the final time before the Highland meet which took place in January.

With saddened faces Thespians Pat Rossner and Carol Bonner wonder if Bob Combs will pull through. Members presented the Greek tragedy Antigone.

Youth Commission displays knives, grenades

Informally discussing the plots, settings, and themes of several famous literary works, club members met to further their knowledge of authors and writings.

To establish a closer relationship between youth and police was the goal of Youth Commission. Members met bi-monthly, usually at the police station and discussed such problems as drugs and delinquency.

Besides visiting the Federal Building in Chicago, Youth Commission also displayed in the library showcase, weapons confiscated from area delinquents including homemade grenades, guns, and switchblades.

Students with literary interests joined Literary Discussion Club with the purpose of enhancing their knowledge of famous works. Members discussed plots, themes, and characters of such masterpieces as "The Metamorphosis" and "The Confessions of Nat Turner."

Formed this year was DECA, a distributive educational program designed for students attending school for half day sessions and working the other half to receive credit. As part of their training, students involved with DECA set up store displays dealing with merchandising.

Various workshops provide knowledge, for all

Keeping in mind their prime goal of becoming successful actors, Joel Deceuster, Sam Carmen, and Bob Combs exchanged and acquired new ideas for stage productions at the I. U. drama workshop.

"How about a game of tennis when you're done with that copyblock?" Journalists who attended yearbook and newspaper workshops at Ball State, Kent State, and Michigan State Universities found that besides the time spent studying layouts, photo editing, and copy writing, there was also time for pleasure. An active game of ping pong or a refreshing swim released tensions after a morning of hard work taking notes at lectures and completing homework.

To learn more about the practical politics and the responsibilities of the American citizen, six seniors traveled to Indiana University to attend Girls' and Boys' State. By splitting up into two parties and forming a mock government, delegates gained an understanding of the state's governing body.

Gaining an understanding of the qualities and duties of a good leader, Student Council and class officers participated in a leadership program at Indiana University last summer.

Thespians increased their knowledge of the dramatic arts by examining make-up, reader's critique, and dramatic reading at a convention at Indiana University.

As delegates to Girls' and Boys' State, Sally Newberry, Betty Bodely, Gail Miller, Jeff Herkin, Mike Barnes, and Joel Deceuster were able to gain an understanding of the state government.

'68 ratings set high goal for SHIELD staff

Leisure time is a rare occasion for Shield's major editors, Corrine Nowak, associate copy editor; Nancy Clark, editor-in-chief; Gail Miller, layout and art editor; and Linda Wasco, copy editor.

Does a crowded atmosphere, books smothered with signatures, and pens running out of ink sound familiar? Of course, that's the scene of the SHIELD Auto-graph Dance!

Color on the division pages, new type, new paper stock, a cloth cover, and a new format were just a few of the characteristics which lended to the making of the '69 SHIELD, distinguishing it from others.

Rating results from the '68 book provided staffers with something to strive for. The '68 SHIELD received A, All-American, and Medalist ratings from NSYA, NSPA, and CSPA, respectively.

Selling pictures at the annual SHIELD Cover Dance and sponsoring two auto-graph dances were money-making projects which helped send seven major editors and staff members of the SHIELD to workshops at Ball State University and Michigan State University during the summer.

Journalists strive to produce award-winning TROJANAL

"All journalists please report to the journalism room immediately to help fold newspapers." This was a familiar announcement made on the hectic Friday mornings when the special editions of the TROJANAL were to be distributed during homeroom.

Indeed, extra help was welcomed when the six to twelve page special editions of the TROJANAL were prepared for homecoming, Christmas, sectionals, and graduation. A four page edition of the paper was distributed on all other Friday mornings.

After the '68 TROJANAL received the highest honor possible, a Medalist, from CSPA, major editors of the '69 paper attended workshops in an attempt to produce an equally award-winning newspaper. Editors traveled to Ball State, Kent State, and Michigan State Universities to learn more about newspaper basics.

Clicking of typewriters, the smell of rubber cement, and a cluttered waste-paper basket were all signs of what went on in TROJANAL class. Editors and their assistants made layouts, wrote stories, did paste-ups, and proofread galleys.

Meeting weekly deadlines and planning their own pages are only small parts of the responsibility undertaken by Trojanal minor editors Scott Markley, Sheryl Engerski, Iris Jasaitis, Melody Schuster, Pat Gallagher, Leslie Brownlee, Jena Preissler, and Geoff Rice.

Taking care of the financial part of producing a weekly newspaper are Doug Wehh, town advertising manager, Ang Fullenwider, business manager, Chris Davidson, exchange editor, Deb Moffett, regional advertising manager, and Janet Wenner, assistant business manager.

Helping organize everything from Centaur's cover to copy are Steph Fruth, art editor; Gayle Miller, layout editor; Judy Nastyn, assistant editor; Linda Anton, business manager; and Elaine Krawczykowski, copy editor.

Centaur co-editors, Lynde Beard and Judy Rabetin work jointly to produce the student interest magazine in the winter and spring.

"What—you want me to go on TV?" After that first nervous appearance, NEWS BUREAU students recovered from the "jitters" when presenting the student news on channel 50.

In addition to producing the TV shows for Highland, NEWS BUREAU served as a public relations tool for the school by sending press releases to community newspapers. Each week the Hammond Times, the Gary Post Tribune, the Highland Journal, and the Calumet Press received school news which was of general public interest.

This was the second year that CENTAUR, the human interest magazine distributed each winter and spring, was printed in the graphic arts department.

Along with increasing the number of pages in CENTAUR from sixteen to twenty-four, a new emphasis was put on photography. A greater use of pictorial essays stimulated the readers' interest.

Writing press releases and preparing pictures to be sent out are News Bureau major editors Kathy Olivotto, Irene Weinstein, Mary McFarland, and Mal Kubiak.

Taking careful aim, photographer Bob Pollitz shoots and later will develop a picture that may be sent to as many as four area newspapers.

In charge of getting stories out to the Journal, the Calumet Press, The Times, and the Gary Post Tribune are correspondents Kathy Samecki, Lorie Ray, Paulette Norcutt, Marsha Minter, Pam Miller, front; and Bonnie Naramore, Diane Terpstra, and Elaine Ripley, back.

Organizations unite, sponsor 'Spectacular'

"It won't be long now . . ." Shutting out the clatter of dishes and chatter around him, an anxious journalist awaited the moment when his position would be announced.

Once again the annual Quill and Scroll banquet took place at Tieble's Restaurant. Positions for the SHIELD, TROJANAL, CENTAUR, and NEWS BUREAU were filled with anticipating juniors and seniors.

Somber faces and a pensive atmosphere marked the importance of initiation at a candlelight service in October.

Decorating a car to enter in the Homecoming Parade was a first this year for Quill and Scroll. Club members selected "Press 'Em'" for the theme of the car which was plastered with newspapers.

Because of last year's success, applause again filled the Griffith High School auditorium as the Quill and Scroll chapters of Highland and Griffith presented the Ball State University Singers in concert.

Appearing on stage at the Griffith auditorium for the second successful year, two of Ball State's University Singers sing their own rendition of a familiar melody inducing a burst of laughter.

NHS students 'cram' to appear on quiz show

Trying out for the "It's Academic" television show was much like trying out for a play. How? Not everyone qualified and only the most capable were chosen for the parts. Like the endless rehearsals for a play, the three selected National Honor Society members spent much time "cramming" before their television appearance.

Leadership, good character, and a 7.5 grade average were the qualifications for second semester juniors and first semester seniors to be admitted to the club.

Gambling, at Highland High School? Not really, but the basketball game between the NHS boys and faculty did provide an occasion for students to place a bet on what they thought would be the outcome.

Donning their gold tassels at graduation, NHS members were clearly distinguished from the other members of their class. "Pencilheads" also displayed their honor cowls, along with fellow class members who had maintained a 7.5 grade average throughout high school.

Students view issues, vote in Mock Election

"Duh . . . How does this thing work? How do I get out of here?" were a few remarks made by baffled voters as they pulled levers in the voting booth. Student Council's Mock Election provided students with a chance to vote for their favorite presidential candidate in the national election.

Even the shy had a chance for a date at the computer dance which Student Council co-sponsored, with Munster. To some it proved that even machines are infallible.

This year Homecoming received extra attention as Council members worked to extend it to a two-day event.

Christmas was indeed a time for "giving" as Student Council hosted a party for the orphans at the Carmelite Home for Girls.

To improve relations between the faculty and the student body, club members sponsored a Student-Teacher Breakfast.

Gathering ideas Chuck McShane, Bob Combs, Pam Miller, Barb Chamberlain, Mr. Michael Keppler, and Jim Budzinski discuss plans for revising the Student Council constitution.

Key Clubbers assist adults in peanut sale

"Peanuts, peanuts for sale! Care for a bag, sir?" These familiar lines were heard all over town when Key Club members assisted the Highland Kiwanis Club in a record-breaking peanut sale.

With the supervision of its parent organization, Kiwanis International, Key Club worked as a service club, helping with several local projects. Bagging candy for the Childrens' Christmas Parade and serving at the annual pancake breakfast were two such activities.

"Mow 'Em Down," the first place car in the Homecoming Parade, and the February Sweetheart Dance were other projects that Key Club members undertook.

To promote citizenship outside of the community, Key Club sent representatives to the annual convention in Indianapolis.

500 Mile Club sells souvenirs of gym floor

"Do people really exist on Mars?" This question, which has been asked many times, was one of several discussed by Horizons in Science Club.

During the year, members of HIS listened to lectures and watched demonstrations given by specialists in various fields of science. Active members attended a banquet at the end of the year sponsored by the Lions' Club, the financial backers of HIS.

Also providing students with the opportunity to explore the unknown was the Science Club. Members of this club performed experiments on their own to investigate the realms of science.

Seniors belonging to Science Club took an annual trip to Argonne National Laboratories, where they learned about atomic reaction and nuclear research.

Besides keeping their minds active by exploring in science, students also kept their bodies in shape by joining the 500 Mile Club. Students gained entrance into the club after running 500 miles.

Souvenirs from the old gym floor are sold by Mike Barnes to Steve Wargo. Money earned helped purchase t-shirts for club members.

"This is Trojan Country" banner shows talent

Lie on his back seventy feet above the ground to paint a ceiling?! Indeed this description of a Sign Painter's job is over-exaggerated. A more likely description of the work of Sign Painters Club might read: service organization which advertises civic events and activities of other clubs with colorful posters.

Industrious Sign Painters strived to keep the school somewhat decorated all year long. Creativity and flowing brush strokes produced Christmas scenes in a spectrum of colors on the windows of the school. It was also the job of Sign Painters to decorate bulletin boards for the PTA Open House.

Club spirit was demonstrated by club members as Homecoming approached. Sign Painters displayed their talent in the "This is Trojan Country" banners which they hung throughout town to advertise the coming event.

Proceeds from a soc-hop were used to purchase poster board and club pins.

20 new coordinates complete cheerleaders bulky wardrobe

With one minute left and the score 81-81, tension reached a peak. Yet, four girls remained calm enough to lead the booster block in a spirited cheer. And with their unceasing supply of pep and energy, they backed the Men of Troy to the very end.

New blue and gold striped sweaters, gold shirts, along with perts and culottes composed the Varsity's attire. These they combined to form 20 different outfits. The JV squad made themselves new outfits—matching blue culottes and vests.

Practices took place to make sure every step was performed with precision. In halls and backyards, flips and cartwheels were practiced until they could be done with accurate timing.

New cheers, steps, and outfits were the visible signs of the cheerleader. But she had something more—the inward desire to back her team, the Trojans, whether they were winning or losing, and to stand and yell with all her might, so all could hear, "Fight for Highland High School, Fight to win this game . . ."

To lead excited boosters in spirited yells requires enthusiasm, precision, and a big smile. For cheerleaders Joan Janott, Mary Sue Ulber, Captain Fran Rossner, and Sue Gregory this task is a meaningful one.

Precision reflects the dedication of Varsity cheerleaders Carol Bunchek, Sheryl Engerski, Captain Kathy Olivotto, and Caroline Lauver as they practice new cheers week after week in their efforts to back the Trojans.

Y-teens' visit to nursing home brings cheer to aged residents

Tears of happiness running down the plump cheeks of a small child and a twinkle in the eyes of an aged person were often the rewards Y-Teen members received for their work. To them that was all that was needed to show their work was worthwhile.

Halloween was not a time for "tricking" but for "treating" as Y-Teen members took candy to children at the Gary Methodist Hospital.

Two needy families were made a little happier when Y-Teens furnished Thanksgiving dinners for them. Christmas caroling at St. Margaret and St. Katherine hospitals and making tray favors for the patients there were other holiday projects. The girls also brought cheer to the aged residents of the Tri-State Manor Rest Home by putting on a play.

Christmas in January?! Of course not, but Y-Teen members did prepare packages for the soldiers in Viet Nam. Included in the parcels were soap, wash cloths, and other such items.

In February, Y-Teens organized a St. Valentine's Day party for residents of an old folks' home in Crown Point.

Lettergirls perform in local holiday parades

"Providing this evening's halftime entertainment will be the Highland Lettergirls performing..." As the band struck up a tune, twenty nervous Lettergirls began their routine.

Donning one of three outfits, Lettergirls displayed the result of long hours of practice in their routines presented to audiences at football and basketball games.

Aching arm muscles and sore feet were often the results of waving pom-poms and marching over a mile in various local parades. Thanksgiving, Labor Day, Memorial Day and Christmas were occasions for marching in parades.

Proceeds from a soc-hop went toward the purchasing of new outfits and letters in the spring. Graduating seniors received charms.

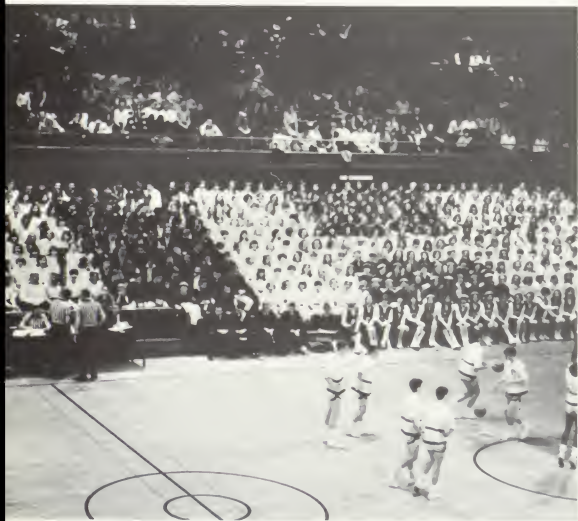

At the end of the school year, mothers were the guests of the Lettergirls at an annual banquet sponsored by the club.

Wrapped up in the excitement of a touchdown play Deb Morrow and Pam Phillips show concern in their tense facial expressions.

Inexhaustible energy is a characteristic which appears to be a natural one for junior Carol Bunchek as she enthusiastically cheers the Trojans.

"Victory varsity victory!" Even though their outfits are new the spirit behind them is nothing new. Seniors Caroline Lauver and Kathy Olivotto proudly hail their team to victory.

Showing her pride in her school and team, junior Sheryl Engerski puts all her energy into backing the team while introducing them to their fans.

With sectional spirit at a peak, boosters formed the traditional "H" with white blouses and blue capes while Lettermen outlined the block.

Blue, gold cards flash to form "V" for victory

To make the varsity game more spectacular, lettergirls, J.V. cheerleaders and varsity cheerleaders lined up to present the varsity boys before the game as the team jumped through the victory hoop.

People in the stands roar with excitement, and then for a split second all is quiet as the audience turns to stare in awe at the splendor of what is happening. This scene took place whenever Booster Club members performed a new cheer with their colorful cards of school colors.

Along with utilizing colored cards to spell out small words such as "victory," "team," and "fight," members of Booster Club wore blue and gold capes, white gloves, and white blouses to add interest to their cheers and improve their appearance.

Selling Homecoming mums and sponsoring the annual Homecoming dance highlighted the club's activities.

Sweaters, charms, and other necessary materials for the cheerleaders, along with capes for club members, were purchased with the money received from selling mums. Booster Club funds were used to buy flowers for the Homecoming nominees and a tiara for the chosen queen.

After trotting down to the football field from the bonfire, boosters all joined in for a spirit cheer. "Well . . . No!" soon became a popular cheer to boost fan enthusiasm and team support.

Organizing the block before the varsity game, Mal Kubiak, Booster Club president, makes sure rows are straight, and instructions understood.

Seniors challenge juniors' strength in football

"I'm just as good as any 'ol boy when it comes to sports!" Despite the fact that people often frown upon girl athletes, GAA members proved that they are just as capable as boys are in surviving football scrimmages, basketball games and baseball innings.

Club members arrived at their meetings with gleaming faces and neat appearances. They left with soiled, rustled clothing, but with the same gleaming faces because they had been a part of all the fun and excitement of the planned activities.

After tryouts new members were initiated into the club at a candlelight service. The true purpose and goals of GAA were seriously considered by the initiates.

Undaunted by the rainy weather and mud-soaked ground, junior and senior members battled in the Powderpuff Football Game, with the seniors reigning victoriously, 7-6.

"Wintermist" was the theme of the Girls' Athletic Association's annual turn-about Christmas Dance. The club also sponsored a Mother-Daughter Banquet in the spring.

It must've been at least a strike to make Cindy Carroll so excited. GAA girls bowled Wednesdays after school for ten weeks during the winter.

Lettermen view hockey game at Fort Wayne

Stubborn donkeys and persistent Lettermen were the ingredients of the ROTC Donkey Basketball Game. "It won't budge an inch!" was the cry wailed as Lettermen tugged at the reigns of stubborn burros.

Helping out in the concession stand was just one activity of Lettermen. Many members sacrificed watching the game to sell refreshments to Trojan fans.

Sporting their blue and gold blazers, members of the Lettermen's Club traveled to Fort Wayne, Indiana for their annual field trip. This provided an opportunity for the boys to be spectators at a professional hockey game.

During sectionals, male voices could be heard along with those of the female boosters. To prove that girls are not the only ones with spirit, Lettermen became a part of the "giant booster block".

In recognition of their many athletic achievements on the various varsity teams, Lettermen received and proudly displayed an "H" on their blue sweaters.

Lettermen, Mike Barnes, assists in selling popcorn and pepsis from the concession stand to Trojan fans during a home basketball game.

Choir sponsors X-mas special, presents fall, spring concerts

"What if my voice cracks when it's my turn to sing? Questions such as this one raced through the minds of nervous choir members as they anticipated singing before large audiences.

Specially chosen for their abilities in Beginning Chorus, members of choir practiced sight reading, and development of tone quality and choral technique.

Singing, practicing, rehearsing—these were the activities of choir members as they prepared for performances in three concerts. Concert Choir sponsored fall and spring programs, plus a Christmas special entitled "Te Deum." "Angels We Have Heard on High" and a selection called "Snow" were highlights of the program.

In addition to the seasonal concerts, an annual spring operetta featured members of Concert Choir.

Highland's Choir joined choirs of five other high schools in the Choral Festival, a non-competitive program sponsored for the first time by Griffith Senior High School in the early spring of the year.

Dressed in their blue and gold robes, members of Choir stand in usual formation as they prepare for an upcoming concert.

fire baton routines fascinate audience

"Me! Go out in that freezing weather and practice marching formations? Forget it!" Despite the frigid weather, band students did brave the early morning briskness to perfect their various routines which comprised halftime entertainment at home football games.

With their bright blue and gold uniforms, glistening instruments, and lively step, band members marched in local parades and began all home football games with "The Star-Spangled Banner." Three baton twirlers plus the drum major and his assistant also performed with the band.

Two band concerts were presented, one for the Christmas holidays and the other in spring, to help raise money. Proceeds were used to purchase new instruments and other band equipment.

Several members of the concert band composed the Pep Band, which helped boost school spirit and backed the Trojans on to victory while they accompanied the cheerblock at home basketball games.

Following weeks of practicing new pieces and formations, the band, led by Drum Major Jim McDonald entertains spectators.

With the attention of all the fans, majorettes Billie Sue Furnas and Janice Nichols skillfully display beauty and talent with fire batons.

Friendly "Hi's" and lively conversation fill the halls while students rush to their next classes, each voice possessing a personality of its own. These voices represent today's youth at Highland High. Unhappiness is apparent by moans and groans over a failed test or piles of homework. Smiles soon appear, as the once quiet cafeteria explodes with chatter of the morning events. But the constant murmur in the halls becomes hushed as the bell rings and minds settle down to a quiet process of learning. A big worry over a seemingly small problem is soon replaced by kind words expressed by the counselors and administration. Being able to express an opinion has become a very important part of life. Through this exchange of ideas and expression the entire personality of a school becomes unique from any other. Personalities within a school become the building blocks of an image.

PERSONALITIES

School administrators play

Besides acting as Student Council sponsor, Mr. Michael Keppler undertakes the job of student coordinator by approving events.

Coordinating the school system is the over-all job of superintendent of schools, Mr. Allen J. Warren. Checking functions of the system, ironing out problems and planning changes also form part of his responsibilities.

Passing resolutions and making rules are among the responsibilities of school board members. Board members, Mr. R. Pettit, Mr. R. Ross, and Mr. J. Terpstra fill these administrative posts.

Aiding students in choosing careers suited to interests and abilities are counselors Mrs. Dodd, Mr. Hansen, Mr. Owens, and Mr. Studer.

varied roles in regulating public system

Imagine men and women sitting at their desks spending their complete working day trying to solve problems involving everyone at school. These are the school administrators with jobs as varied as regulating the school system to counseling students.

Superintendent of schools has the responsibility of co-ordinating the school system. His aids, the assistant superintendents work with him to check the functions of the school system, iron out problems, and plan changes in the schools. Also helping with these tasks is Mr. Paul Kiezynski, director of the attendance and social service department.

Supervising students and school functions are among the duties of the principal and assistant principal. School board members also play an active role on deciding school policies.

Seeking to help students with personal or any other kind of problems is the main job of the guidance counselors who are also in charge of working out schedules.

Principal Robert Day and Assistant Principal Merlin Clinkenbeard work diligently at one of the many administration problems.

Watching out for the welfare of the school, and helping the superintendent are Dr. Donald Kaupke and Dr. Dean Speicher, Assistant Superintendents of Schools.

Faculty members offer students knowledge,

What's the answer? This simple question dominates every class from math to metal shop as the faculty strives to instill in students their own knowledge.

Students aren't the only ones who sacrifice their free time to study. Besides preparing for classes, hours are spent grading tests, checking assignments, and calculating six weeks grades.

However teachers don't believe in "all work and no play." Bowling provides entertainment for the members of the faculty league every Thursday. Horse-shoes and food became vital elements at a picnic hosted by Mrs. Anne Mathew, while others joined in the teachers' breakfast sponsored by FTA. Coaching sports and sponsoring classes and clubs are among other extra-curricular activities undertaken by the faculty.

Confident of defeating NHS members in a basketball game, faculty teammates planned careful strategy. Even though the ladies were edged by the girls 9-8, the men pulled through victoriously.

One of the many teachers participating in the weekly faculty bowling night, Major Preston Phillips carefully aims for a strike.

administration

From Kitchen clean-up to typing absentee lists, office personnel, nurse, cafeteria cooks, and maintenance staff work daily at their jobs.

Office secretaries work to aid students, faculty, and administration. Part of the daily duties of Mrs. Myrtle Watson are such things as answering the telephone, typing absentee lists, and often reading announcements. Helping counselors with their jobs and keeping records on each student is Mrs. Grace Reichers.

With duties such as washing windows and scrubbing floors, the custodian staff labors to keep the school in order. Gardening and repairing non-working systems also lie among the duties of the maintenance staff.

Aiding anyone in case of illness is the main task of the school nurse, Mrs. Ida Deceuster. She also keeps medical records on each student.

Aside from typing, answering phone calls, and filing, Mrs. Laurene Coles and Mrs. Myrtle Watson run the entire main office as efficiently as possible.

Inexperienced class of '71 begins as "green"

"We're the greatest under the sun, we're the class of '71!" It didn't take long for the "green" to wear away which revealed a proud and determined class of sophomores beginning their high school career.

Experiencing the rush and excitement of homecoming, sophomores built their first float. After weeks of work they completed their entry entitled "Stomp 'Em."

Sweatshirt sales added to the regular activities of the underclassmen. Funds also grew after sponsoring the annual Mr. Football dance and giving up a Saturday to have a car wash.

Along with their assumed responsibilities, sophomores were also granted privileges such as choosing class rings, soon to identify them as upperclassmen.

Selecting class colors was both a duty and a privilege that fell to the class of '71. Sporting their choice of forest green and mint green during spirit week, bewildered faces melted to looks of accomplishment as they chanted their victory yell.

In capturing the spirit of homecoming, sophomores constructed a float to participate in the festivities. After hours of work and sleepless nights the sophs came up with their creation entitled "Stomp 'Em."

Experience proves worthwhile to junior class

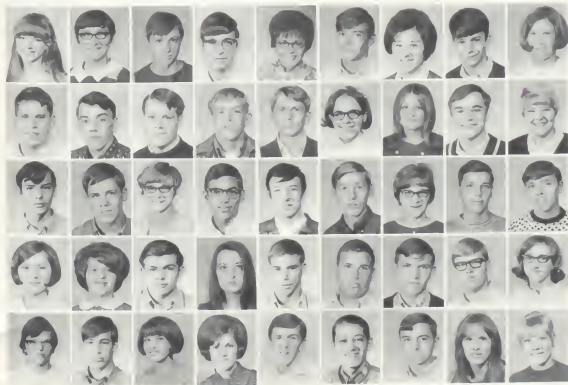

Planning the year's activities are Pat Gallagher, vice-president; Mrs. P. Sims, sponsor; Mike Roche, treasurer; Laura Arnold, president; Mr. T. Johnson, sponsor; and Fran Rossner, secretary.

Experience and a ring... two characteristics that signify juniors as "somebody." Somebody perhaps not quite as bold as the seniors, yet not as frustrated and bewildered as the sophomores.

Sponsoring the annual chili supper, juniors succeeded in raising money for prom. Although making money was still a major concern, class members also sold blue and gold pennants to promote spirit. With the surplus budget and the chosen committees, the long and tedious hours of work began for prom.

With the experience of one homecoming already behind them, juniors more efficiently constructed their second float, "Pride is Our Power," which captured second place in the float competition.

Being upperclassmen, more authority was given to them, and with this achievement came a sense of greater responsibility. Another year had passed before it was realized—a year of soc-hops, sweat-shirt sales, dances, and prom. But even though it's gone, it will never vanish from the memories of the juniors who anxiously await the final year of their high school career.

Dreams become realities for seniors as final year slips by Previous visions of sitting in the bottom rows of the booster block, relaxing on the senior court, and donning senior beanies suddenly became more significant. They became realities after two years of waiting.

"Bury 'Em," their last homecoming float, was awarded first place trophy during the festivities which the class proudly accepted for the second consecutive year. Slipping and sliding through the muddy field, the senior GAA members proudly hailed a 7-8 victory over the juniors in the Powderpuff Football game to set a new tradition. Other activities included a senior class party before Christmas and another one later in the year and a trip to Chicago for all senior English classes to see "Romeo and Juliet."

Senior year, however, was not all fun and games. College applications, jobs, and military enlistments proved to the future graduates that their climb to the top of the ladder of life had just begun.

While robes and mortar-boards became a part of school life, seniors realized that the work and goals pursued in the last three years had just been the basic training for the world they would soon face. June 6, 1969 at the Civic Center was a moment never to be forgotten.

Taking care of the selling of senior beanies, Dan Csikos, vice-president; and Jeff Harkin, president, demonstrate their authority. Class officers also planned all senior activities.

1969 — A year of firsts, a time for change. Highland High's first ten years of existence were marked by a decade of unforgettable traditions... homecomings, football games, soc-hops, basketball games, proms, and commencements. But with the passing of these years, and the coming of the next, numerous innovations came into being. Therefore, the '69 SHIELD staff has tried to present some of the SOUNDS OF YOUTH.

A yellow embossed spiral design on a base of homespun orange lends itself to the idea of sounds. These colors and design were chosen by the major editors with the assistance of Mr. Jack Bundy from S. K. Smith Company, Chicago, Illinois. Another innovation was the use of heavy cloth material instead of the traditional leather.

Mr. Ed Hackleman, representative from Delmar Printing Company of Charlotte, North Carolina, advised and assisted the staff in producing this year's SHIELD. It was with his help, the major editors selected new type faces, paper stock, and printing techniques.

Differing point sizes of Universe Medium type were used in the body copy, indent blocks, captions, and index. 30 point Lydian was used for the headlines.

In the opening section, a no column Mosaic style of layout was used. To add to the openness of this style, body copy was set in 11 point staggered type. The balance of the book was done in 3 column look and life layout.

In order to receive full contrast in black and white pictures and more vivid color in the first 16 pages, 80 pound Warrens Enamel Dull paper was used instead of the glossy enamel found in previous volumes of the SHIELD.

To further express the idea of sounds, a special circular effect over a 100% orange color screen was employed on division pages.

Special credit should be given to Mr. Tony Guasti of Capri Studios, Oak Park, Illinois for the expert quality of his photography. Most group shots, candid, sports action and team shots, senior portraits, division page, and all color pictures resulted from his knowledge and experience of picture taking and developing. The remainder of the candid, sports actions shots, and ad pictures are due to the efforts put forth by Student photographers Chuck Dijak, Don Reitman, Bob Pollitz, and Geary Smith.

An encouraging word from a friend, an understanding smile from a teacher when he sees your homework isn't quite done, an outsider asking how things are going with the yearbook, a burning desire to accomplish something because you know it isn't for yourself, but for the students—these rewards are gained by every yearbook editor. No one can truly appreciate the blood, sweat, tears, and endless hours spent cropping pictures, writing cutlines, fitting headlines, and creating layouts—no one except those who forfeited all this time—the staff.

*As editor, I take no credit for the production of this book—I was not its creator, but you, the students of Highland High, are the ones who deserve a special thanks along with the administration and last, but far from least, the faithful staff members for contributing to the '69 SHIELD. Another thanks to Mr. Tom Davis for putting up with us, the ideas we came up with, and some of the weird things we did. And above all, to Mr. Richard Johns for having faith and confidence in me as an editor, and for giving me the basic journalism
knowledge I needed,
I owe a debt of gratitude which cannot be repaid.*
